Why Is RN Patient Advocacy So Critical Now?

The number of deaths and disabilities due to medical errors continue to climb every year. The World Health Organization of the UN ranks health care in the US at #37 in the world.

It is time to take action in a positive and creative way. As an independent clinical RN Patient Advocate, you can be the difference in a patient’s life.

Never before has our health care system needed its experienced nurses so desperately.

Join us and embrace this exciting new role so critical to health care in our country.

The Rand Institute Study of Quality Health Care, published in 2004, found that, overall, adults received only approximately half of the recommended levels of care (both acute and chronic care).

“Most of us take health care quality for granted”, said lead study author Elizabeth A. McGlynn, Ph.D., Associate Director of RAND Health. “This study shows that we can’t. There is a tremendous gap between what we know works and what patients are actually getting. Virtually everyone in this country is at risk for poor care.”

Dr. Barbara Starfield, Johns Hopkins School of Hygiene and Public Health, reported in JAMA, 2000, that deaths due to medical error and negative drug effects totaled 225,000 annually. She cautioned that these numbers were primarily hospital based and did not reflect patients suffering non-fatal disabilities or poor treatment outcomes.

Karen Mercereau, RN Patient Advocate
Creator of RN Patient Advocates, a groundbreaking program

Empowering People In Their Healthcare

Karen has had a lifelong passion for ensuring that her patients get the best care possible and are fully educated about their options. An expert at moving her patients effectively through the healthcare system she has, with kindness and dogged persistence, created efficient medical teams that work to maximize the best possible outcomes for the patient.

Never satisfied with the status quo, Karen took her experience in the field and set about creating an Advocacy Program to tap the vast resources of experienced clinical RNs. This Advocacy Program pioneers a new model for patient care in the US. RN Patient Advocates, PLLC, is the ten year evolution of this groundbreaking work.

Karen lives in Arizona and continues to devote her life to empowering her patients and building the powerful National Network of RN Patient Advocates — our national team and community.

“A well-practiced nurse and visionary leader, Karen Mercereau is developing a form of practice to provide care not readily available — that of a nurse advocate. A nurse dedicated to helping people bewildered about how to navigate our tortuous healthcare system and obtain the best, most relevant care available including services considered complementary to our typical biomedical care.”
